5th February 2021

Dear Parents and Carers,

Next week your child's class teacher will be giving them a phone call to have a friendly chat about how they are doing during this lockdown. This will be a general wellbeing catchup where your child can share the highs and lows of remote learning with them, as well as tell them about all the other fun things they've been getting up to.

Teachers will be happy to say a quick hello to parents when calling, but the main aim is to speak with the children in their class, so please do allow them to spend the majority of the time talking with your child. We would also appreciate it if, as long as they are comfortable and old enough, they be encouraged to chat free from distraction, preferably in their own private space, so that they can relax into the call and talk openly.

Unfortunately, we will not be able to tell you when your teacher will be calling as they will be fitting calls in as and when they can, whilst teaching in the classroom and providing remote learning. If it is not convenient when we call, then we will call back later in the week.

Please note that teachers will not be making calls to children currently attending school as we are lucky enough to talk with them every day that they are here!

Wishing you all a happy weekend.

Kind regards,

The Bealings Team
